Project Title: Championing Gender Justice in Tertiary Institutions of Zimbabwe

Duty Provinces: Harare, (Zimbabwe)

Contract Duration: 10 days

Estimated Start Date: 16 November 2022

Deadline for bid submissions: 11 November 2022

Background

Female Students Network Trust (FSNT) advocates for the rights of young women in Zimbabwe’s institutions of higher learning through leadership development and mentorship programs. These are done through various empowerment thematic areas that include: women’s participation in institutional governance bodies, women’s rights advocacy, policy advocacy, facilitating access to psycho-social support services to survivors of sexual gender-based violence, and economic empowerment initiatives. FSNT’s vision is to become a centre of excellence, innovative and empowerment programs for female students in Zimbabwe.

FSNT is implementing a project under the Citizen Engagement for Accountability Activity [CEAA]. CEAA is a five-year development activity implemented by a consortium of Zimbabwean organisations, which includes the CEAA Secretariat, Legal Resources Foundation (LRF), Restless Development, and other local partners. CEAA will contribute to public affairs strengthening and civic engagement in Zimbabwe by promoting robust and informed effective citizen participation in governance processes at multiple levels with an eye to improved, citizen-driven development. The Activity will work with and through local organisations’ initiatives and seek unique methods, innovative pathways, and partnerships to achieve this purpose. CEAA’s objectives are to: (1) Activate citizen agency for accountability, (2) Strengthen women’s leadership and inclusion; (3) Increase youth empowerment and positive engagement.

FSNT is implementing a project title: Championing Gender Justice in Tertiary Institutions under the CEAA Women-Led grants. The project’s overall objective is to promote female students’ participation in college leadership and national elections, ultimately contributing towards CEAA Objective 2 on strengthening women’s leadership and inclusion. FSNT desires to develop a draft gender responsive ordinance using the findings from the Gender Audits, initial stakeholder consultative reports and the state of the ordinances report as foundational documents.

Why the Development of Draft Gender Responsive Ordinance?

Zimbabwe's colleges inherited ordinances (code of conduct for students) from the University of Zimbabwe's Ordinance No. 30¹. Ordinance 30 was crafted during colonial times and has become antiquated in complying with the rights discourse. The Ordinance did not focus on creating safe spaces for female students to thrive and lead but simply focused on reducing cases of physical violence within the college environment. Further, the Ordinance had less emphasis on the rights of women in the college environment. By nature, colonialism was anti-rights oriented. The failure to review these ordinances in the post-colonial period and the increase in numbers of female citizens enrolling in institutions of higher learning created an uneven learning environment. More so, the non-availability of substantive sexual harassment policies, perpetuating gender-based violence in tertiary institutions, has ignited the interest on this project to develop a draft Gender Responsive Ordinance which seek to safeguard the plight of female students in tertiary institutions using findings from the Gender Audits, initial stakeholder consultative reports and the State of the Ordinances Report as foundational documents.

Purpose and scope of the study

The purpose of developing a draft Gender Responsive Ordinance is to address gaps which are in the existing Ordinances. It is also meant to review these ordinances and create a comprehensive Gender Responsive Ordinance which safeguard the plight of female students in tertiary institution.

The Gender Responsive Ordinance will be shared and used in all tertiary institutions in Zimbabwe in a bid to promote gender equality, inclusion as well in creating safe learning environment for female students in tertiary institutions in Zimbabwe.

Objective of the draft Gender Responsive Ordinance

- To increase knowledge and understanding of human rights among students in tertiary institutions so that they can identify violations, demand, access, seek redress and enjoy their rights;
- To strengthen female students presence and capacities in decision making for their meaningful participation in student politics and beyond ;
- To address gender inequalities and ensure inclusion of gender analysis in policy formulation, implementation, monitoring and evaluation.

Methodology

A mixed-method study of both qualitative and quantitative data will be proposed by the consultant(s) conceptualised under a gender analytical framework. The study will include data collection methods like surveys, desk review and key informant interviews.
